

Memo 1: Chocolate Cereal Campaign Overhaul

Team,

The current chocolate cereal campaign is underperforming because it is not grounded in behavioral or demographic data. Creative direction is too broad and does not reflect how the product is actually consumed or who drives volume.

Data Summary:

Primary buyer is males ages 18 to 34, with a secondary segment of parents buying for children ages 6 to 12.

Purchases peak late at night and during weekend stock-up trips.

Cereal is commonly bought with protein snacks, milk alternatives, and convenience foods.

Engagement is highest on short-form video platforms.

Observed Gaps:

Messaging is incorrectly focused on breakfast.

Creative is not segmented across audiences.

Media placement is misaligned with actual user behavior.

Strategic Direction:

Reposition as a flexible, indulgent snack.

Create two campaign tracks, one for young adults and one for parents.

Execution Requirements:

Develop short-form content showing real use cases.

Align media spend with mobile-first platforms.

Expected Outcome:

Improved engagement, stronger conversion, and increased basket size.
