

Memo 2: Vanilla Cereal Positioning

Team,

The vanilla cereal campaign is too generic and does not reflect the data. The product has a clearly defined audience that values health, routine, and quality.

Data Summary:

Primary buyer is females ages 25 to 44 in higher-income, health-conscious households.

Purchases are consistent and tied to routine behaviors like weekday breakfasts.

Common pairings include fruit, yogurt, and plant-based products.

Engagement is strongest on wellness and lifestyle platforms.

Observed Gaps:

Creative lacks premium positioning.

Messaging does not highlight health or routine.

Visuals do not match audience expectations.

Strategic Direction:

Position as a clean, reliable everyday staple.

Focus on simplicity, routine, and lifestyle integration.

Execution Requirements:

Build content around meal prep and morning routines.

Upgrade visuals to a minimal, premium aesthetic.

Target higher-income suburban areas.

Expected Outcome:

Stronger brand loyalty, higher repeat purchases, and improved product perception.
